Thirty university students from ASEAN countries visited the Graduate School of Engineering

As a part of “ASEAN JENESYS 2.0” run by the Japan International Cooperation Center (JICE), thirty university students from ASEAN countries visited the School and the Graduate School of Engineering.

After having an enjoyable lunch time with local students, ASEAN students received a presentation from Professor Shuji Tanabe, head of the “Center for the Promotion of International Engineering Education and Research”, who provided an overview of Nagasaki University as well as the research targets of the Graduate School of Engineering in Nakabe Hall.

The students also enjoyed a welcome song performed by the local students’ a cappella circle “Hamonepia”.

Some students clapped their hands in time with the songs and the others took photos.

After the tour of Bunkyo campus included visiting the University Library and the “Cafeteria wastewater purifying facility”, a discussion between ASEAN and local engineering students of Nagasaki University in six groups, exchanging the opinions and ideas on university life. The exchange was beneficial to all students, and was enjoyed by all.

This project will also be held on June 27 (Thu) for the second visitors.
